OLYMPIA (AP) - Several oil firms have denied accusa-tions by the Washington State attorney general that they conspired to restrain and monopolize production of erude oil. crude oil.

Attorney-General Slade Gorton of Washington State filed suit in U.S. District Court Monday claiming that 10 oil companies operating on the West Coast created an artificial scarcity of oil and refined products in Washington and the rest of the country. It would do both the members and the system good if MLAs from all sides of the House began to work out a better way of solving these conflicts Perhaps the creation of some type of impartial arbitration board could replack the trial-by-rattlesnake

Washington in August

WASHINGTON - August in Washington is the most civilized month in the year. The heat's enough to melt the copper on the White House roof, but there are sailboats on the Potomac and music in the parks, and even the exhausted computers and Xerox machines now talk to gaters and X-crox machines now tank to each other in whispers.

The big cats are away in August and the mice are at play. The Supreme Court is as empty as the toderal treasury. The president has gone to Georgia. It has easy access to the sea and to the mountains. The long gentle slope from tidewater to the Blue Ridge between the Potomac and the Rappahannock, is one of the most heautiful and varied stretches of country in America, hidden from general view most of the time by the fog of politics. Library Facts

During the past few weeks there have been several comments about the proposed new central library printed in the local press. As chairman of the Greater Victoria Public Library Board I im pleased that the importance of the library's service is so widely acknowledged.

However many comments have been made without the benefit of some imporcant facts. These facts, which have been known by the library board for several ears, are the basis upon which we have apported the proposal to move the central library into the provincial government building on Broughton Street.

Fact 1: The central library is the core of the entire system. This resource centre cannot be replaced or diminished in importance by more branch libraries. In fact, the development of branch libraries over the past ten years has placed in-Fact 2: The increase in public use of the services at the central library has far exceeded other growth factors in the community. For example, the population of the area served by the library has grown by 36 per cent since 1967. During the same 20-year period, the total book circulation has increased by 163 per cent: the number of borrowers has gone up by 47 per cent and the book collection at the central library by 75 per cent. The total book collection has risen by 214 per cent. the number of reference questions by 1,079; and the number of books catalogued each year by 257 per cent. All of these increases have placed presaure upon the extremely crowded and outdated facilities at the central library.

Fact 3: There is no other library, either national or local, that can provide the information to answer the more than 100,000 celerence questions handled annually by the information services department of the central library.

There is no computerized information network in Canada, the United States or anywhere else that can provide the infornation required by our library patrons

Pass the Popcorn

It's ironic that one of the first legacies of the NDP administration dumped by the incoming Socreds in political acumen or amazing January, 1976 was an "aggressive promotion of B.C.'s excellent physical and human resources to convince national and international film and television producers to locate their productions in our beautiful province, to quote McCarthy's press release of Monday announcing the hiring of highly technical subjects, books are not produced in microform, nor are they likely to be within the next twenty years.

The microfilm edition of those magazines available in this form cannot be magazines available in this form cannot be purchased until the year following the normal publication. It would, therefore, be necessary for the library to purchase both forms at roughly double the current cost. Library staff are currently examining the availability and cost of back issues of magazines in microform. The cost will likely be high, between $25,000 and $50,000.

In addition, readers must be purchased and space found in which to locate them. Even if the library were able to replace all its back files of periodicals with microfilm, the amount of space saved would be less than 1,800 square feet. This is about five per cent of the present building and about 3.5 per cent of the proposed building.

The space that would be gained in the present building is stack space that could use not be converted to public use.

Fact 5: The central library as a resource centre for the entire library system is not an outmoded idea. During the last ten years, large central libraries have been built in Calgary, Regina, Edmonton and Saskatoon. The new Winnipeg central library of 130,000 square feet opened in May of this year. In eastern Canada, St. Catharines opened a new central library of 63,000 square feet in June of this year. Windsor's central library of 101,500 square feet was completed in 1973. The largest public library building in Canada, the Metropolitan Toronto central library, will open in September of this year. At a cost of $30 million, it contains 364,000 square feet. There is no evidence of a trend towards smaller central library buildings.

During the period that the proposed new central library has been discussed with municipal councils, many of these facts have been presented. I would be most appreciative if you would bring them to the attention of your readers. — G. R. to the attention of your readers. — G. R. Hutcheson, chairman, Greater Victoria Public Library Board.

The Games People Play

By HENRY FAIRLIE Washington Post

I sometimes have the feeling that America is one vast playground and that the Americans are more and more using it like one.

In order to use it, since it is so vast, they need a lot of gasoline. It is therefore a little ab-surd that the Carter administration suggests that it is only a few economies in the use of energy which it is asking of the American people, when the only thing that would have any significant effect would be to sacrifice the entire way of life.

James Schlesinger said recently that, in the first four days of July, the American peo-ple used more gasoline than the entire land forces of the United States in the whole of 1944, the year they were most tinuously in action around the

The comparison is sure it is as instructive. Private cars are using more gaolimpm 1977 than army vehi-cles used in 1944, So what?

The first four days of July are holiday weekend, when the Americans are hard at play, using their playground as they increasingly use it most weekends. This has become a part of the American way of life. What is Schlesinger asking them to do? Give it all up?

A few days later, President

Jimmy Carter drew another comparison, just as melodramatic. He said that the peoples of several countries a quality of living as the people of the United States, but that, they consume, per capita, only half the amount of energy

It needed only a rapid calculation to decide that all the boats would not belong to-corporation vice-presidents or belong to plumbers — they can afford them — and some must belong to just the ordinary mid-dle class of America: perhaps to a more affluent section of it than the rest, but still to kinds of people who in Europe would not conceive of owning a boat. There were just too many boats for it to be a recreation only of

But the relative affluence of point here. What is interesting is how, in greater numbers each year. Americans have taken to their playground, on beaches and in bays and in gulfs; on rivers and on lakes in mountains and in deserts and

The great outdoors has always been an obsession of the American mind, but never before have so many used it so regularly for recreation Although the point seems to have eluded both Schlesinger and Carter, to get to this playground one needs a car. and, at least at the moment, it tunate fact that cars are moved

Western Europe is a small and crowded peninsula. There are few places for its million to go, and none of those places is ery far away. There is not the immense coastline of America. There is not the variety of land-scape on such a scale. There is in every season. It does not lie between the tropic and the slow enough for one to look down on the countryside. He was arnazed by what he saw, until he exclaimed: "All sense of European structure vanishes." We forget the difference too easily It is not only of a leisure society that I am speaking — although the United States is its forerunner - but of a way of life that is peculiar to it, and which cannot be ignored if one is discuss ing something as personal as energy. There is more space in America, there are more places to go, and more people able to go to them, so they use more gasoline. In fact, it would not have been surprising if in the first four days of July the American people had consumed more fuel than all the land forces in the the Alps with his elephants. But Schlesinger's figures. Such comparisons are mesmerizing. But they are not addressed to American society as it now ex-

Puritanism

Americans in the hundreds of - thousands sail in the great bays and estuaries of this country; they get there by car. They backpack in the wilderness and in the mountains; they get there by car. They kayak on the rivers; they get there by car. They ski down the slopes of their country in winter and climb them in summer; they their beaches to swim or to laze; they get there by car. They go to the desert in spring and find its beauties; they get there by car

Even in the cities during the week, they go increasingly to tennis courts, swimming pools and golf courses; they get there mostly by car. And these sands add up to millions upon millions, using their country year-round.

They need gasoline even to get to the places where they can then do what needs no gascan then do what needs no gas-oline. There is nothing more galling than meeting a backpacker in the mountains, enjoying his high with nature, complaining about the dread-fulness of a civilization that allows so many cars to make so many furnes and to use so much energy — and then watch him at the foot of the mountain calming get into the Datsun that had brought him there, to drive back home in the serene and uncomplicated belief that at least his fumes have been for a worthy purpose. But when this perversen becomes the basis of the energy policy of an administrais time to utter a protest, because there is no way in which it can or should change the desired way of life of a nation.

I happen not to engage in most of these activities, but I enjoy watching others enjoy them. So all that gasoline was spent in the first four days of July? Then I have to say to James Schlesinger, and through him to the president, that it was at least as well spent as by the armies of 1944.

Americans are probably an unenvious people. They may and do have other faults, but envy is foreign to their nature. There is something wrong in using the energy crisis, real or imagined, to excite an envy of the enjoyments that others find in their own way. The environmentalists have, always seemed to me to border on envy. Tie them to the puritanism implicit in Schlesinger's and Carter's remarks, and we will all be done, and allowed to use gasoline only when we are sent to fight wars. Let the tanks roll!

CIA's Drug Experiments Violated Nuremberg Code

By BOYCE RENSBERGER

New disclosures about the Central-Intelligence Agency's now defunct program to conduct experiments on human beings to find drugs or other methods of controlling their thoughts and behavior have raised a storm of ethical

Did the subjects of the tests know what was being done to them? Were they informed of the risks and did they have a chance to refuse to co-operate without fearing reprisal?

Is research aimed at damag-ing or controlling a healthy human mind ever ethical? What if such research was perceived necessary to defending Americans against enemy attempts to control the mind of prisoners of war or American diplomats?

The light in which such questions are approached today is different from that in which the CIA's experiments were begun in the 1950s. At least 20 years of consciousness raising by the civil rights and human rights civil rights and human rights movements separate 1977 from the earliest days of the CIA's fears that the Soviets and the Chinese had developed exotic means of controlling behavior.

Adopted in 1953

And yet, the intelligence of-ficials who started the experiments were much closer to the days of the Nuremberg trials of Nazi war criminals that produced the first internationally recognized code governing human experimenta-tion. The Nedemberg Code of 1947 said medical research should be intended to improve the lot of mankind and should be conducted only on persons who had been informed of the nature and risks of the experi-ment and who had consented. United States government in 1953, the year in which Admiral Stansfield Turner this month told a Senate hearing that the CIA's mind control experi-

In some of the experiments Turner said, people did not know they were being ex-perimented upon, a situation directly contrary to the Nuremberg Code and to every subsequent set of ethical acts of which neither the researcher nor the subject realize the import. For example, in one study at a major university medical centre 51 pregnant women who had consented to participate in a test of a new labor-inducing drugwere questioned after the test had begun. Of the 51 women 20 did not realize until interviewed that they had agreed to participate in research. Among guidelines promulgated by a recognized body. According to recently released CIA documents and interviews, powerful mind-altering drugs were put in the drinks of unwitting bar patrons in New York and San Franciso. It is also known that the CIA slipped LSD into the food or drink of unwitting persons at-tending parties and military conthose who did know, most did not understand some aspect of the experiment or its risk.

Four of the women said they would have refused if they realized they had a choice.

Balancing Risks

If this occurred, as it did, among private citizens in the care of personal physicians at a major medical centre in the midst of the current heightened sensitivity about ethics of research, the adequacy of the consent procedures the CIA researchers said they used in

if a person knew he was to receive a behavior-altering drug, his responses would be different from the case if he did not know. Several drug researchers said in interviews that it is possible to overcome this effect by using placebos, control groups and "clever" experimental design.

They said there would almost never be a scientific reason to require that subjects not be in-formed beforehand.

Since the promulgation of the Nuremberg Code much of the growing debate over the ethics of human experimentation has turned on the question of how much information a person much information a person must be given before his consent is asked. In some cases the doctors themselves may know little. Can a person with no special background in pharmacology or biochemistry or physiology understand enough about an experiment to be considered sufficiently informed?

A second major point still hotly debated is what constitutes consent. Prisoners and mental patients, many ethicists argue, are not really free of the implied pressure that if they consent they will be released sooner or that if they refuse they will be hurt somehow. Many of the CIA experiments were done on prisoners and mental patients.

consent procedures are carried out have frequently found that the informing and consenting can be very hasty, perfunctory

Another area of disagreement among medical researchers involves what constitutes a worthy experiment, balancing the degree of risk with the promise of benefit. Dr. Bernard Barber, a Barnard College sociologist who specializes in science and the specializes in science and the ethics of human research, has posed a number of hypothetical research projects to large numbers of scientists and asked whether they would apparticipate in research. Among Typically, where the risk to subjects is high, most acientists say they would not approve or perform such studies. But a significant minority, upwards of one-quarter, constantly any they would sistently say they would.

Just last year, Barber con-cluded from his surveys of the ethical standards of biomedical scientists in major institutions that "there is indeed inade quate ethical concern. . . that is reflected in excessively risky procedures." He recommends that additional controls are needed to ensure that scientists do not perform unethical experiments on people.

'Morally Wrong'

One psychiatrist who has had close personal knowledge of the nature of Soviet and Chinese "brainwashing," the activity the CIA said it was responding to, is Dr. Robert J. Lifton of Yale University.

"I feel psychological research should never be used on behalf of destructive techniques," Lifton said in an interview. He said it was morally wrong for psychiatrists and other specialists in the mind and behavior field to engage in such research.

book on brainwashing entitled "Thought Reform," said that in the 1950s many behavioral Communist-fearing mood of the times run away with them. "During that time," he said, "people became fascinated with aspects of mind manipula-tion without exploring the pos-sible consequences of their involvement in such research.

How to be a Court Smash

Last weekend, I was invited to visit some triends and to bring my "tennis stuff." That was my mistake. I did.

I've been playing tennis since I was a tyke and one of the things that I like about the game is its simplicity. My tennis stuff consists of a white T-shirt, a pair of white shorts. a pair of white athletic socks, a pair of white Keds sneakers and a racquet with a wooden frame. I threw my stuff into the car and headed for suburbla. It was a beautiful summer day, somewhat breezy, perfect for sailing if it hadn't been perfect for tennis, in which case I would have brought my sailing stuff. ought my sailing stuff. My host, Bob, said that he had arranged

My host, Bob, said that he had arranged a mixed-doubles game for the afternoon and asked if I would like to play indoors or out. The question puzzled me: why inside in July? "We've got a great little indoor facility here," Bob explained. "On a day like this you don't have to worry about the wind and the sun, and you don't get the-bad bounce you might get on clay because it rained on Thursday night and it might still be soft. The club's got a nice carpet."

* * * I had never thought of the word 'carpet' in terms of tennis. I think of it in terms of carpeting. "It's texturized acrylic." Bob said. "The ball has a lower acrylic. Bod said. 'The ball has a lower bounce, but there's a definite reduction in leg and foot fatigue.'' I said I'd take my chances with the wind and the sun. I always have. My general philosophy is that the wind will carry my shots in and my opponents' shots out. This is known as "optimism."

At 3 o'clock we duly convened at an outdoor court. Bob was wearing a powder blue warm-up suit with a white stripe down the side. He was also wearing a down the side. He was also wearing a headband, a wristband and a pair of sneakers that might have been designed by Buckminster Fuller. "These shoes are the greatest," he said. "They've got your four key factors." I asked what the four factors were that he considered key. "First there's your wearability," he said. "Then there's performance, comfort and By WILLIAM ZINSSER styling." My Keds had one key factor: they fit.

Peggy and Pam arrived, and they were a vision — a vision of two women turning up for a modelling session. Peggy's dress had enough pink stripes to make the effect more pink than white, and she had a matching pink wristband, pink visor and pink pants. I never saw anyone so color co-

Pam was a symphony of greens and whites. She told Peggy that her dress was 100 per cent acrylic boucle. "The color is pistachio," she said, "but it also comes in camel, paprika and sand." Bob said his headband was incredibly light — the lightest he had ever found. Somebody mentioned. Sonanders. Paggy and that her tioned Spandez. Peggy said that her sneakers breathed.

Bob looked me over with disdain, or maybe disbelief. I was just standing in my whites not even knowing what they were made of. I had brought a sweater to put on after the game — if, like Peggy's sneakers. Fwas still breathing. "No warmup suit?" Bob asked. I was in my warm-up suit! If was also my playing suit! "You. suit. It was also my playing suit. "You should get one of these," he said. "It's got elasticized inserts under the arms so you can really warm up your swing."

* * * I noticed that Bob had three racquets and a little bay of resin. Each of us had brought a can of balls: orange, green, yellow and white. I had brought white. "Let's start with the yellow and save the orange for twilight," Bob said. The chances of my still being on the court at twilight seemed would in the things of the court at twilight seemed would in the delivery thanks the wearshill to small. I just didn't have the wearability

One of Bob's racquets was of wood, one was of steel and one was a Prince. It was my first sight of the game's new super-weapon; its hitting area was 50 per cent bigger than my racquet's hitting area, not counting the wooden frame, which I sometimes use as a hitting area, especially around twilight. I felt like the scientists at Alamagordo glimpsing the genie that they had loosed from technology's bottle and would never stuff back in.

To my relief. Bob started with his steel racquet. He and Peggy went over to warm up against Pam and me. Between Bob's powder blue warm-up suit and Peggy's pink stripes I could hardly see the yellow ball. When we were ready to play, Bob took off the top of his warm-up suit, revealing a shirt with powder-blue markings, but he kept the pants on.

The psychology of his move did not escape me: He wasn't expecting a real workout. But when Pam and I went ahead by 5 to 3 he took off the pants, revealing a pair of shorts with powder-blue markings and a pair of legs that he hoped would impress us with their reduced leg fatigue. I accommodated Bob's strategy by blowing the next two games.

"No wonder. You're not getting your optimal elasticity with those strings," he said, analyzing my shot that tied the set at 5 to 5 by failing to clear the net. "How tight is that racquet strung anyway?" I only knew that it had strings and that they seemed fairly tight. "I'm not saying you should string it at 75 pounds' tension like Borg." Bob said. "I mean, look what Connors does at 55. But you definitely need more torque."

more torque."

When Pam and I took a 6 to 5 lead, Bob changed to his Prince racquet. He stood at the net waving the thing like a lacrosse stick. "Do you realize," he said, "that this baby has a 'sweet spot' four times larger than yours? That's the high-response zone of the strings." He pointed to his high-response zone.

of the strings." He pointed to his high-response zone.
At such moments my high-response zone is in my cortex, and I looked at the sweet spot in his stomach where I hoped one of my shots would land — if I could just get enough torque. I forget about leg and foot fatigue. I forgot about pistachio and Spandex and boucle. I forgot about the shame of not having a wristband.
At twilight we changed to orange balls.

Four months' interest payable January I, 1978
Denominations: $1,000, $5,000, $25,000, $100,000 and $1,000,000 and 9 year 10 month 81/4% bonds due July 1, 1987 Issue price: 98.75% yielding about 8.44% to maturity Interest payable January 1, and July 1 Four months' interest payable January 1, 1978 Denominations: $1,000, $5,000, $25,000, $100,000 and $1,000,000 and 19 year 81/2 month 91/4% bonds due May 15, 1997 Issue price: 100.75% yielding about 9.16% to maturity Interest payable November 15 and May 15

Two and one half months' interest payable November 15, 1977
Denominations: $1,000, $5,000, $25,000, $100,000 and $1,000,000.

The 91/4% bonds dated September 1, 1977 and due May 15, 1997 will be issued in a maximum amount of $375 million.

The Bank of Canada has agreed to acquire a minimum of $450 million of the new bonds. This acquisition will be open as to maturity except that the total will include a minimum of $95 million of the 91/8 May 15, 1997 maturity. The new 7½% bonds due June 1, 1980 are an addition to $125 million of 7½% bonds due June 1, 1980 and dated July 1, 1977. The new 8% bonds due July 1, 1982 are an addition to $600 million of 8% bonds due July 1, 1982, dated May 15, 1977 and July 1, 1977. The new 81/4% bonds due July 1, 1987 are an addition to $225 million of 81/4% bonds due July 1, 1987 and dated July 1, 1977. The new 91/4% bonds due May 15, 1997 are an addition to $525 million of 91/4% bonds due May 15, 1997, dated May 15, 1977 and July 1, 1977, and will be eligible, beginning October 1, 1977, for purchase by the Purchase Fund which became operative May 15, 1977. Proceeds of the offering will be used to redeem $500 million Government of Canada bonds maturing on September 1, 1977 and for general purposes of the Government of Canada.

The new bonds will be dated September 1, 1977 and will bear interest from that date. Principal and interest when due are payable in lawful money of Canada. Principal is payable on maturity at any agency of the Bank of Canada. Interest is payable without charge at any branch in Canada of any bank. Definitive bonds will be available on or about September 1, 1977 and thereafter in two forms: bearer form with coupons attached and fully registered form with interest payable by cheque. Bonds of both forms will be in the same denominations and fully interchangeable as to denomination and/or form without charge (subject to statutory transfer requirements where applicable). The new bonds are authorized pursuant to an Act of the Parliament of Canada and both principal and interest are a charge on the Consolidated Revenue Fund of Canada

Applications for the new bonds may be made, subject to allotment, through any investment dealer eligible to act as a primary distributor or through any bank in Canada.

In the past, Canada has had an all-time low, could only no large off-shore freezer-type trawlers operating off the B.C. coast because they weren't profitable to operate. The long-distance off-shore fishing was the domain of the Soviets; Poles, Koreans, and Japanese, who use large refrigeration ships to take species – such as bake and dogfish — not usually sought by Canadian fishermen.

But the Canadian fishermen do need the freezer-type trawlers, capable of making long trips, to get such profit-able fish as rock cod. Environment Canada, said Todd, will only allow one or

Mill Back After Gas Leak

The Northwood Pulp and Timber Ltd. mill was back in-operation Tuesday after sys-tem modifications needed to avert any future hydrogen sulphide gas leak were com-pleted.

the modifications were satis-factory to management, the union and Workers' Compen-astion Board officials.

As a result of work done on the Northwood system, a number of other improvements have been agreed to by management.

The company spokesman said the leak Friday which resulted in one death was the first industrial accident of its type since the mill opened in Chris Smith, a WCB spokesman, said earlier that the ac-cident was caused by high levels of hydrogen sulphide and 'no one could have anticipated it happening.'

Smifth said several more workers would have been killed if it had not been for prompt action by first aid attendants.

walter Langdon-Davies, 36, of Prince George, died as a result of the gas leak and another man remained in hospital. Thirteen others were treated for gas inhalation and released.

The gas leak in the washer and digester area was caused by reaction of chemicals used in the cooking and bleaching

Sense Urged In Laborer Dispute

of Labor has asked both sides to adopt "a commonsense approach" in a dispute between the Laborers Union Local 602 and its international head-quarters, saying local elections should proceed.

The international union had attempted to put the local under trusteeship but the move was turned down by the courts. The local officers and their supporters took back control of their offices from international trustee Stacey Warner.

T believe the central principle that must be followed in this dispute is that the rank and file members mus have the opportunity to decid the issue, said federatio secretary Len Guy Tuesday.

"We're getting snowed," said Otway.
People naturally assume that the route parallels the highway corridor but Otway explained the pipeline will be as much as 40 miles from the Alaskan Highway in some spots and will cut right through "the heart of some prime elk winter range." winter range.'

"The impact would be less following the highway."
Otaway explained. "The access and maintenance capabilities would be right there."

Under the current company proposal, a massive network of interconnecting roads would be needed to service the line. This would further aggravate the impact on wildlife rages.

Premier Bill Bennett might have provided a clue to the

So many bland assurances have surfaced about the environmental impact of the pipeline. This seems incredible, since there has been only one cursory study — involving a couple of days of field work — on the 500 miles of proposed corridor through British Columbia.

The federal government committed itself to an overland route for gas transportation early last week, but a firm decision hasn't yet been made on the actual route.

This writer sincerely hopes the government will come up with a route more closely parallelling the existing disruption—caused by the Alaska Highway.

It would be the least costly from all points of view.

Collision Mars Yachting Trial

NewPORT. R.E. (AP)
Australia, a new aluminumhulbd yacht, survived a collision with France I at the start, then salled to victory Tuesday, apparently eliminating the French yacht from America's Cup competition.

For Baron Marcel Bich. ear, it was his 18th straight year, it was his 18th straight official loss against foreign competition in three chal-lenges for the trophy. Swe-dan's Sverige, meanwhile, evened the score with Gretel II at 252 by beating the other Australian 12-metre yacht by 33 seconds in their fourth se-mi-final meeting in Pshode Is-land Sound.

The elimination series to pick an American defender continued with Courageous beating Enterprise.

Tod Turner, owner of base-ball's Atlanta Braves, brought Courageous back from a two week break to beat Enterprise

14-7 record in the June and July trials, took Enterprise skipper Lowell North at the start by 12 seconds and stretched his lead on first windward leg to 52 seconds.

Walker Misses Record

BRUSSELS (UPI) John Walker of New Zealand came within half a second of breaking Filbert Bayl's world 1,300 metres record Tuesday when he was clocked in 3:32.7 at an international track and field meet here.

Walker, who has voived to add the 1,800 record to the mile mark he holds, also ren
the fastest mile of the season in Dublin last month in 3:32.0.
Bayl's 1,300 metres record and 3:32.2 has stood since February 1974.

"I'm determined to break it this summer," said Walker
after his mile exploit.

The New Zealand gold medalist's last lap burst carried him well clear of the field and the lack of somebody to pushhim over the last 100 metres probably cost him the world record.

Benand Vilian of Swits-necord.

Bernard Vilian of Switzerland was second in 3:38.4.

Public Announcement

DISTRIBUTION OF CBUFT BY CABLE SYSTEMS IN SOUTHWESTERN BRITISH COLUMBIA

March, 1976, certain cable television licencees, in presenting their applications for augmented channel service, proposed the reception and distribution of CBUFT, the CBC French language service, on Channel 4 upon the implementation of the augmented channel service. In the absence of any expressed preference by the corporation for any specific distribution proposed by some of the licensees.

However, subsequent to the hearing a considerable amount of concern was expressed by the licensees and other interested parties with regard to the potential impact of distributing CBUFT on Channel 4 immediately upon commencement of transmissions in September,1976. The problem was further compounded by the fact that none of the licensees were in a position to implement the augmented service by the fall of 1976. Accordingly, the commission in its public announcement dated July 23, 1976, permitted, temporarily, the distribution of CBUFT on restricted Channels 2 and 8 by licensees in the southwestern British Columbia region.
However, this approval was subject to the following conditions:

The licensee must provide remedial action where necessary to maintain a good quality service;

If the licensee's system has augmented channel service, CBUFT must be distributed on an augmented channel in addi-

The commission may exempt a licensee from the requirement of using Cable Channel 2 for the distribution of CBUFT if the process employed by the licensee to up-grade its facilities renders the use of that channel no longer feasible." Further, the commission required that CBUFT be distributed

Subsequently, the cable television licensees in Greater Vic-toria asked to distribute CBUFT on Channel 3 instead of Channel 4. After further consideration, the commission, in a public icensees to distribute CBUFT on Channel 3 until November 1 1978, or until such time as any new priority television station

On November 2, 1976 (Decision CRTC 76-764), the commit sion approved the establishment of a CBC English language television station in Victoria to commence broadcasting in September, 1978. In view of the potential impact the introduction of this station would have in the Greater Vancouver area, the association of Lower Mainland cablevision operators representing the cable television licensees in the Greater Vancouver area requested that the commission consider deferring mplementation of the distribution of CBUFT on Channel 4 until the CBC Victoria station came on air. On April 5, 1977, the commission issued a public announcement in which it stated that such a delay may well be in the public interest. Accordingly, the commission advised the cable television licensees in the Greater Vancouver and Greater Vicforia areas that they would only be required to distribute CBUFT on Channel 4 when the CBC English language Victoria television-station commenced broadcasting. However, this extention was conditional upon strict adherence by the licensees to the terms of the July 23, 1976, public announcement,

Since that time, however, certain facts have come to the commission's attention obliging it to reconsider its decision.
The commission has received numerous and persistent complaints from subscribers of cable television systems licensed southwestern British Columbia that the quality of reception n CBUFT on restricted channels is not satisfactory. n Victoria will now commence broadcasting not in September, public interest that the extension granted in its public announcement of April-5, 1977, be rescinded. Consequently, the commission requires the cable television licensees in Greater Vancouver and in Greater Victoria to distribute the signal of CBUFT on a clear channel not later than November 1, 1977. However, the commission is prepared to waive the requirebe distributed on Channel 4, leaving it to cable licensees to propose a clear channel of their choice. At the same time, the commission will expect the licensees to come to an arrangement in order to distribute CBUFT on a uniform channel The commission is prepared to consider applications by the southwestern British Columbia licensees to distribute a non-Canadian television signal on two restricted channels on the basic service as well as on a channel on the augmented licensees that it is within their discretion to select the optional light of the above, the cable television licensees concerned must submit, for the commission's approval, their proposed

This ensures that when the government of the day falls, the second major political the second major political party inevitably becomes gov-ernment, Wallace told a Vic-toria Chamber of Commerce luncheon at The Empress.

He said the only way in which a non-socialist government can be kept in power is by having at least two non-socialist choices.

Wallace also criticized the legislative process, saying those at the luncheon would be appalled to see at first hand "the wasteful and stupid way in which the legislature operates."

Mair's the Man on Liquor Licences

The legislature approved in principle Tuesday amendments to the Liquor Control and Licensing Act that would make Consumer and Corporate Affairs Minister Rafe Mair the final arbiter on all liquor licences.

liquor licences.

The amendments also provide for more local control of entertainment in licensed premises, give the liquor administration general manager power to approve sites proposed for neighborhood pubs, permit the removal of intoxicated people from licensed premises and grant policemen wider search powers.

Mair said the decision transferring licence appeals from the liquor board to himself "has been one of the most difficult decisions that I have made as minister."

EDMONTON (CP - A small group of people sitting on blankets in a nondescript office begin wounding themselves.

In one corner, a hearded man sipping a soft drink lies on the floor with blood trick-ling down one leg and casual-ty comments that he just bought himself some makeup.

Drug Link Denied in Elvis Presley's Death

THE KING IS DEAD

Elvis Presley, a one-time truck driver who as a rock 'n' roll singer was idolized by fans and denounced by preachers as the devil's tool. died Tuesday of a heart ail-ment at age 42.

Doctors denied Presiey's death was drug-connected.

Dr. George Nichopoulos, longtime physician to the swivel-hipped baritone who was known as the "King of Rock" Roll," said an autopsy revealed a constriction in one of the main arteries to the heart, which restricted blood flow and brought on a heart atand brought on a heart at-

Elvis was working as a truck driver after graduating from Humes High School when he walked into Sam Phillips's office at Sun Records in 1955 to record Blue Moon of Kentucky. The re-cording became a hit.

His career was largely the creation of a promotional genius, Col. Tom Parker. Presley made his appearances on the Ed Sullivan show after Parker became his manager.

"When I found Elvis, the boy had nothing but a million dollars worth of talent," Parker said once. "Now he has a million dollars."

Presley's fan club once had 400,000 members in the United 5 tates, Canada, Mexico, Cuba, England, France and Australia.

MOSCOW (UPI) - Soviet bureaucrats aren't going to jog away excess fat. They're going to plan it away.

The fight against fat began in earnest in January when the newspaper Literaturnaya Gazeta reported that 50, per cent of Soviet women, 30 per cent of men and 10 per cent of children "unfortunately have. extra weight."

To the Western eye, Soviet women have always seemed a bit plump, but to many Soviet men, heftiness is much preterred to the "puny" figures idolized in the West.

Literaturneya Gazeta was not interested in aesthetics, just health. It warned obesity can trim 10 to 20 years off one's life expectancy. The Soviet people, it said, "eat too much white bread, augar, candy and cakes, pies and jame." And ice eream is everywhere — from Red Square to train stations to decoming in for a major over-haul. Natural chocolate is on partment stores. haul. Natural chocolate is on the decline and is being re-placed with chocolate made with soybean flour and dry skimmed milk. Sunflowers and corn are going into other candies and caramel fanciers are finding more fruit-berry titings. The newspaper also linked overweight to the habit of gregarious floviet people to hold parties at the slightest excuse —"and in one evening they eat a week's norm of calories."

In reply to the article, government officials said they were attacking the problem by readjusting the nation's production plans for basic tood products.

'Great work is being done in the production of foodstuffs,' said E. Lebedev, chief of a department of the Ministry of Food Industry, in this week's newspaper.

S. Burenkov of the Health Ministry ealled for an "expanded assortment of dairy products of skim milks and less fat in butter."

All of which may bring down calories but, unfortunately, miss the real culprit. As Literaturnaya Gazeta says, too many Soviet citizens think "the more, the sweeter, the fatter the better."

"That's the proteim." "That's the problem."

Flank Steak Needs Slashing

A fairly reasonable piece of meat that allows for some interesting cooking and delicious eating is the flank ateak, costing as little as $1.50 per pound.

This cut, from the lower part of the steer, is boneless, but possessing very strong connective tissues. It must be treated carefully if you want to be able to get your teeth into it.

Some young friends asked my wife and myself to a cookout a few years back and I was most interested to see they had flank steaks to cook over the white-hot embers of an open wood fire. They had bought flank because it was the cheapest steak they could get — but they handled it beautifully.

Using a rezor sharp, thin-bladed knife, one of the men carefully out a diamond pat-tern of shallow slashes just through the fibrous tissue that runs lengthwise along the steak, and then turned the meat over and repeated the slashes — big four-inch dia-monds.

With the salad and a batch of baked potatoes ready and a wire grill set about five inches above the hot coals, the meat was put to the heat for a bare five minutes, turned and given five more, and then served right away.

The steaks were delicious and when I showed others how to slice fiank steak diagonally ecross the grain, everyone found them to be moistly

If you follow what the young folk did with the steaks, brushing with melted butter and broiling under high heat for five minutes each side, you will have what, today, is called London Broil. And it would cost you a mint in a restaurant in a restaurant.

Having given a fast recipe, let me warn you-that if you don't follow the rules for broiling flank steak, you will end up with a piece of tough leathery meat that is almost inedible. inedible.

You must carefully make shallow slashes across the grain, you must not overcook - five minutes each side under high heat is bang-on - and cutting a served portion on the diagonal will give optimum tenderness.

There are, however, scores of fascinating and delicious recipes for flank that cook the DEAR ASSITY MY 28-year-old daughter has made a decision that is breaking my heart. I honestly wonder if he's in her right mind.

At 16 she married because he was pregnant, and now the has seven children. The girls bern only five days ago. She and her husband have decided to keep one of the twins, and give the other up for adoption. Abby, can you believe this? Their reason is so terrible, that I'm almost ashamed to tell you. ashamed to tell you.

I've tried to tell my daughter that the club foot and cleft spend and are relieved of the palate can be corrected with symptoms associated with it. . surgery, but she says that six children are all they can af-

I offered to take the defective baby, but she says it would create problems to have her in the family. She's already contacted an adoption agency, and a childless couple is waiting to adopt the twin.

Can you help me? Please HEARTSICK GRANNY.

DEAR GRANNY: Urge your daughter to see a psychi-atrist. She could be disturbed, atrist. She could be disturbed, or suffering from a temporary depression from which she would recover. Should she go through with the adoption it will not be final for a year. Perhaps she'll regain hersenses by that time, but if so, what & cruel ordeal for the adoptive parents!

DEAR ABBY: This letter is in response to HATES HUNT-ING. If he doesn't want to go hunting, he doesn't have to, but is he willing to help foot the bill to save wildlife? Hunters contribute about $230 million annually to preserve wildlife. (Also, sport hunting has never endangered a species.)

Sadly, there are slob hunters who drink while hunting, and "shoot everything that moves." Fortunately, they are a small minority, which is growing smaller because in many states there are mandatory safety courses for hunttory safety courses for hunt-ers under age 18 or 24.

As for hunters killing others or themselves) by mistake, in 1876 there were nearly 100,000 deer hunters in New Mexico, but only six hunting accidents involving guns! (No setallities) action can be observed in to-day's deal. He was sitting West.

Hunters appreciate wildlife more than any other group. Please be fair, Abby, and give us hunters equal time. — L.L.

On Hamman's opening lead of the club king, East played the discouraging three. At trick two, Hamman shifted to the heart three.

Had dummy's king been put up, declarer would have had his ninth trick. But there was no hurry in making a decision in hearts, so he played low from dummy. East captured the trick with his ten, and played back a club to Ham-man's ace.

Once again Hamman put' declarer to the test—he led the heart eight. Now declarer had to make a decision. He finally decided that since Hamman had been revealed as the man had been revealed as the possessor of the ace and king of clubs, East probably possessed the heart ace. So he put up dummy's jack. East won the trick with the queen and made haste to return a heart to Hamman's ace, for the setting trick. Two underleads of an ace had paid a nice dividend.

ONE WAY TO GET A HEAD

1.ONTON (CP) — A Swiss collector recently bought a preserved, fattooed human head with plugged nostrils for 12.000 (21.000) at a Christile's auction here.

The luyer, lawyer Jean Paul Barbier, said he did not see it as a dead person but as a work of art.

The 714-inch-high head fetched twice its estimated price in the auction cata-logue, it was described as: "A the latto (moto) ornament, open mouth showing rane teeth, plugged nostrils, the black hair with hula feather ornument, flax cord at neck, killed by blow to left temple."

The head, part of an attetion of Hawaitan and Maori art, was originally acquired by a Capt. O. Deedes who is known to have arrived in New South Wales as a convict guard in 1851. He sent the head to a friend in England. The head was later presented to the Royal Centerbury Museum.

A Christie's official said: "From time to time we have sold shrunken heads and preserved heads in auctions of primitive art, but never one as expensive as this."

Wine Industry Ripe For Change

TORONTO (CP) — People drive from Toronto to Niagara on-the-Lake to buy Canadian wine.

The products of Inniskillin House Wires cost more than other Canadian wines. But after only three years of operation, Inniskillin has produced wines that have been judged in blind tests to be better than some expensive im-ter than some expensive imports.

"The industry was ripe for dramatic change," said Michael Vaughan, a wine critic and consultant. "It took somehody with imagination to see the potential for making good table wines, free of any labrusca taste, without doing what the industry has done in the past—ameliorating the wine with water and sugar and blending the grapes."

with water and sugar and blending the grapes." Imiskillin's winemaker is Karl J. Kaiser, an Austrian who first tasted Canadian wine on a visit in 1968. "It was horrible," he said. "That really made me decide that I should go into the field."

He enrolled at Brock University in St. Catharines, Ont., to study chemistry, meanwhile reading wine-making books and preparing wines in his garage in plastic drums.

At that time Kaiser met Donald Ziraldo, a grape-grower and agriculture gradu-ate of University of Guelph Ziraldo sampled Kaiser's wine and was so impressed he wine and was so impressed he decided to form a wine company with his friend.

Ziraldo prepared a brief for the liquor control board of Ontario (LCBO) outlining plans for a small operation to produce quality table-wines from Ontario's hybrid vinitera grapes. Meanwhile, Kaiser worked on a sample batch at Ziraldo's home in St. Cath-Ziraldo'sohomé in St. Catharines.

The board granted them a licence to produce up to 10,000 gallons a year, about 60,000-bottles. It was the first winery licence issued in Ontario since

Because Inniskillin is small, the winemaker has total con-trol from grape-growing to bottling and production can be geared to seasonal considerations rather than artificial schedules.

Kaiser said a big company must bring in grapes to meet production schedules for a particular wine whether the grapes are ready or not. The last few weeks on the vine are critical since the sun transforms natural grape acids into sugar. Some companies try to compensate by adding sugar, but the result is never as satisfactory as the natural as satisfactory as the natural process.

Inniskillin is small enough to wait until the grapes are at their peak. It is the only wine company in Canada owned by a winemaker and a grape-grower. A third partner, a Burlington, Ont., lawyer, owns a vineyard.

Vaughan said it is possible to provide a vineyard.

to produce excellent wines from Canadian soil. "People are surprised to know this. The climate and conditions here really are as good as in Germany and many regions of France that people 'oh' and 'ah' about.

"Far some reason, people think European wines are natural, an act of God, and Canadian wines are unnatural, an act of technology. That simply is not true."

When mounted on monorails—it can be built at ground level or underground—the cars hang from an inverted concrete trough.

Electric motors power a suction fan which lifts the cars off the bottom of the trough toward the roof. This brings rubber drive and guide wheels in contact with the trough ceiling.

The drive comes from an electric motor. The guide-wheels allow the cars to swing outward on curves, so no banking is necessary.

The air cushioning provides a fast, quiet, almost vibrationless ride, Bliss said. The quiet is especially important-when "hanging trains up in the air" in the middle of

David Booth pleaded guilty four charges of supplying

When asked by the court how he proposed to pay, Booth replied:

"I have a few horses I will have to sell."

X-Wing Sparks Interest

LONDON (Reuter) — A British design that seems to combine a jet fighter and a helicopter has aroused so much interest abroad that the United States Navy is spending $2.5 million just to build a fullscale model.

The Xwine is the creation.

The X-wing is the creation of Prof. Ian Cheeseman, who developed it in the mid-1960s. It is hardly a wing at all, more a four-bladed rotor.

The U.S. navy is interested because putting the device on a jet fighter-like body might produce an aircraft that could take off vertically from a carrier, then fly forward at near the speed of sound.

The Lockheed Corp. has taken up the idea and is developing it under contract to the Defence Advance Research Projects Agency for Cheeseman, now teaching elicopter engineering at outhampton University, said e planned to give a plane oth the X-wing and convencial aircraft wings. He credited a young American scientist, Robert Wilcams, now working for a doctorate at Southampton, with tiding the idea a step further

To provide lift, air must be pumped through vents in the wings and released over the trailing edges.

Turbofan jet engines mounted on the underside of the craft would give forward thrust, turn the rotor and pro-thrust, turn the rotor and provide air to pump into the wings to provide lift.

The plane should be able to take off vertically and then fly forward at up to 230 m.p.h.

Then the "wing" locks into position, two blades pointed forward at about 45 degrees and two blades pointed back. In this mode it is expected to fly at about the speed of sound.

The concept exists now only in the form of a quarter-sized model; built by Lockheed last tear, being tested in wind tunnels in Maryland.

Lockheed is building a full-scale X-wing craft for ground testing next year in California.

adaptable plants which grow as happily in balcony or patio tubs as in open garden rows. No longer are they confined to the knot garden, a tradition of bygone days of leisure.

The growing of herbs today gives us more pleasure in our meals and perhaps may even be said to provide a few min-utes of leisure too. With a amall collection growing close at hand, a tiny piece of a cou-ple of plants added to a salad, casserole, or a pizza is less time consuming than other ways of flavoring a favorite-dish. So, there is a little lei-sure gained.

If you already are growing thyme, summer savory, pars-ley, - mint, marjoram and sweet basil, take this last chance to gather leaves for liked you are sure to renew them each year. And the per-fume of drying herbs in a city apartment will be as enticing to your friends as the equally alluring smell of baking bread.

In August there are still plenty of sun ripened herb pieces for drying, but by the end of the month the new growth will be rather soft line for immediate use but containing less oil for high flavor when dried.

Most useful to homemakers determined to cut down on sugar in fruit pies and various cooked fruit desserts are three herbs angelica, sweet cicely and lemon balm. All can be grown in tubs or p ers, or in the open garden.

These herbs are NOT swee teners: they have the effect of reducing the tartness of fruit when it loses its natural sweetness in cooking. Lemon sweeness in cooking. Lemon juice alone does the same to some extent and has been known for this purpose by generations of past cooks when sugar was rare and ex-duces many to take the atti-fude that "as long as I have money and the stuff is in the supermarket, I intend to buy supermarket, I intend to oby all I want" at any price. September will be a good plunting month for the peren-nial types of herbs that you might plan to buy.

If you want to see culinary herbs, make a point of looking for them in September flower will see not only what they look like but get an idea of their aromas at least while

From the way they are dis-played you can see which are tall growing and which are twarf. And just as important, you will be able to copy the botanical names of those you want. The best displays will have separate name card on each herb with common name and botanical name.

As the use of herbs helps in cutting down on salt and sugar in everyday meals, they come out of the realm of le-gend and fable into the bright daylight of modern concern with economy and nutrition. And bright daylight is the chief requirement for growing

$1,500 A MONTH FOR BEIRNES

Ald. Helen Beirnes will be Ald. Helen Beirnes will be paid $4,500 for three months work as co-ordinator of the government's new hospitality training program, Provincial Secretary Grace McCarthy said Tuesday.

McCarthy, in responding to questions from Elicen Dailly (NDP - Rurnaby North), said

(NDP - Burnaby North), said Beirnes has been signed to a three-month contract at $1,500 a month.

The minister added that there was no job competition held for the position because it was to be a short-term appointment.

McCarthy said Beirnes' job is to help establish a training course designed to teach those in the tourist industry how to be more hospitable to B.C. visitors.

Seattle Firm May Get Job

A Seattle company which has teamed up with a Victoria firm will beat out another city firm on a $22,000 drainage study contract if Saanich-council accepts a recommendation from the public works accommission.

The committee voted 3-2
Tuesday to recommend that Chin and Mayo of Seattle and McCrae-Kramer of Victoria, be given the job, which is expected to lead to large savings through control of runoff.

The local company of Willis Cunliffe and Tait had bid $17,000 on the study project.

Municipal engineer Cliff Warren said the Seattle company had more expertise in this line, having started this type of research in the early 1970s.

Alan McCrae said the Alan McCrae said the $22,000 was the top figure for costs. In a breakdown, he said $4,000 would be for computer work by the Seattle company while the remaining $15,000 would be split between his company and the Seattle firm for labor costs.

Ald. David Paterson said Willis Cunliffe and Tait are getting into this kind of work and have had two or three similar projects.

He and committee chair man Ald. Sandy Noel voted against recommending the Victoria-Seattle combination for the job.

"It hasn't been proven to me that Willis Cunliffe and Tait can't do the job. They're a Canadian firm and we could get the job for $5,000 or $6,000 changer." he said

cial sense than leasing space in the new provincial govern-ment building on Broughton. . McKenzie declined to identify the building, except to say it is in a downtown location. 12 years old and has a total floor area of about 50,000 square feet — the same area the Greater Victoria Library Board wants to lease in the new building.

An offer will be made to the city and to the library board shortly, with a price in the region of $2 million, he said. McKenzie said it would be foolish to turn down the foolish to turn down the chance of owning a building for that price, considering that the present lease propos-al would entail paying out $4 million in rent to the provin-cial government over the next

Exercise, Longevity Linked

OTTAWA (CP) - Elderly persons can improve every-thing from their blood pres-sure and co-ordination to their sexual performance with a regular exercise program, says a sports-medicine special-ist.

Dr. Guy Metivier told about 100 seniors at a recent semi-nar on physical activity and aging at University of Ottawa that life expectancy increases with better maintenance of muscle strength.

If muscle strength is kept up, he said, improved joint mobility, respiration and a feeling of vitality will follow.

Dr. Bernard Talbot, a rehabilitative medicine specialist, told the group a person who follows an exercise program has better co-ordination, improved hearing and eyesight and experiences a slower deterioration of his strength.

Exercise stimulates elasticity in the body so posture is maintained and the ability of

'Community' Bank Foils Loansharks in Montreal

MONTREAL (CP) — An eastend experimental "community" bank opened by the Royal Bank of Canada in 1973 has made it easier for poor people to get a loan at normal interest rates instead of turning to loansharks.

The branch was opened following a market study showing 20 per cent of the population— mainly low-income workers and welfare recipients—lacked access to regular credit and banking facili-

The branch is the only one of its kind in Montreal, but the Royal Bank has similar experimental community branches in Toronto, Win-nipeg and Vancouver.

Many customers at the Montreal branch are on a first name basis with tellers,

Killing Elephants Revolting 'So Grit Your Teeth and Do It'

New York Times

New York Times

WANNTE, Rhodesia — The bull elephant, grandest of the animals, is pitiful in death. At a single shot from a 475-callber rifle, he trumpets and growls in pain, lifts his trunk into the air as if beseeching the elements, then crumples to his knees and flops ponderously onto his flank, his eight-ton weight sending dust-boiling into the air.

Every day now at least 50 of the mighty enimals fall in the remote bushland of Wankie National Park, home of one of the largest surviving elephant herds in Africa. By the end of the month, 600 elephants will have been shot, leaving perhaps 14,000 luckler ones to roam the thicketed grasslands of a park roughly the star of the star o

New York

New York

NEW YORK (AP) — The stock market was mixed Wednesday, steadying after some early selling.

The Dow Jones average of 30 industrials, down more than two points in early trading, had cut its loss to 1.12 at 885.16 by 2 p.m.

Gainers took a small lead over losers among New York Stock Exchange-listed issues.

NYSE-volume came to 13.92 million shares at midafternoon.

Analysts noted an easing of selling pressure and some cautious buying after the Dow's decline Tuesday to a new 19-month low.
But they also said the market was still suffering from concern over rising interest rates and fears of a slowdown in the growth rate of the econ-in the growth rate of the economy.

The commerce department projected significantly slower growth of the gross national product in the third quarter than in the second.

UV Industries jumped 2% to $21. The company said it had received feelers from several companies on possible mergers.

Wheat, which opened slightly higher, lost nearly a penny and oats were steady to one cent a bushel lower. Corn held onto fractional gains.

Old crop soybeans, trading at eight cents below the previous close, reflected weaker cash bids at the Gulf.

cash bids at the Gult.
Technical moves involving buying bean futures and selling soybean products pulled down oil and meal deliveries.
The lower product prices, in turn, exerted pressure on beans.
